Basic Plans for Farm Discussed at Bureau Rally Here

500 Producers Attend the County-Wide Meeting at City Hall

FRASIER IS SPEAKER

Farm Bureau Seeking Economic Justice for Producers

Over 500 Farm Bureau members attended the county-wide Farm Bureau meeting held Saturday, June 18, at Hope city hall. Lee Garland, local bureau member, presided over the meeting in the absence of H. H. Huskey, County Farm Bureau president, who is attending a farm bureau meeting in New Orleans.

Waldo Frasier, Executive Secretary of Arkansas Farm Bureau Federation was introduced by the chairman and gave an interesting talk on State and National Farm Bureau programs and accomplishments in which he brought out the importance of nation-wide farm organization. Mr. Frasier said that if the farm organization is to live the farm program must be diversified, and all sections of the United States should organize just as Hempstead county, in co-operation with other Arkansas counties, has done in order to obtain better results through organization. As one large organization we can take advantage of opportunities which otherwise would not have been available. Mr. Frasier explained that the aim of the Arkansas Farm Bureau Federation is to restore and maintain a rightful position for farmers in Agricultural Economics. He also said that the Federation is working on the following problems:

1. Farmers' Income.
2. Fundamental Crop Control.
3. Studying tariff and trade agreements in order to get tariff and sales tax lowered.
4. Endorsement of National Organization Program.
5. Being about conditions so that rural boys and girls can have educational opportunities for the same length of time as others.

In reply to questions about Rural Electrification for this county, Mr. Frasier advised the group that since money was available to the State for this project, the people of Hempstead county should get busy through committees and ask for an allocation of money during our next fiscal year. According to Mr. Frasier, $150,000 has been allocated to Miller county and a project started. In order to have rural electrification $5 per member must be collected in addition to permission to construct the electricity on the land.

L. C. Baber, district county agent, who is being transferred to Northwest District, spoke to the group on the Value of Farm Organization. He also discussed the problem of trying to figure out how farm people can have enough to live on, there being 10,500,000 acres of open farm land in the State of Arkansas, or 9 acres per farm person. Mr. Baber complimented county for its fine organization and left with them the important thought that not only should the organization be maintained for one year but for future years in order to have and to witness the results.

Model Farm Program
H. Earl King, Chairman of County Soil Conservation Committee held an open discussion on How the Present Farm Program Could Be Amended to Better Fit the Needs of Farmers in This Area. The points which the organization at their monthly meetings favor are as follows:

1. Get cotton allotments out by January 1 each year.
2. That the percentage factor determining cotton allotment should be based on cultivated acres for the year in which the program is in effect.
3. That payment for pasture should be $5 instead of $3 and the standards raised.
4. County committee should be given reserve acreage to be allotted to new farms. That authority is now in the hands of the State Committee.
5. That there should be no administrative areas within any county.
6. That Congress should vote a processing tax to promote a parity pay-

Most important of the two is the complete rebuilding of Highway 73 from its junction with No. 4, north of Hope, through Columbus to its junction with Highway 55 near Saratoga. The other operation will be the re-graveling of Highway 4 over the six-mile stretch from junction with No. 67 at Hope to the Nevada county line. This work will begin Wednesday, Mr. Thomas said.

Rebuilding of the old Columbus road, constructed originally as an improvement district highway in 1919, will be a major undertaking. It measures 19 miles from the junction with No. 4 here to the junction with No. 55 west of Columbus.

The old improvement district road is in bad shape, and west of Columbus to Saratoga it is impassable in wet weather, that section being in Howard county. Rebuilding of the road will restore easy communication to Saratoga and other Howard county points regardless of weather conditions.

The project will include ditching and grading operations, construction of bridges, and gravel surfacing. Grading operations will begin Friday.

The work on No. 73 is a joint State Highway-WPA project, with WPA labor being used exclusively. No labor jobs will be placed through the highway department, Engineer Thomas said. The highway department will furnish supervision and machine operators only.

Sheriff Jim Bearden and Coroner J. H. Weaver said Mrs. Foss admitted shooting her husband, then walked into the kitchen and turned the gun on herself.

The husband is 74. Mrs. Foss gave her age as 69.

Report Weevils to County Agent

Farmers Urged to Prepare for Control—Next Month Will Decide

Hempstead county farmers are urged to report at once to the county agent's office if they find any evidence of cotton boll weevil in their fields.

The boll weevil is already appearing on the early squaring cotton in some of the southern counties of Arkansas. Reports have been received by Dwight Isely, entomologist, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, from Calhoun and Little River counties.

The infestation in Calhoun county was not in isolated spots, but rather generally distributed over a 45-acre field. This type of infestation seldom occurs except when weevils have survived winter in unusually large numbers, Mr. Isely said. No injury of importance was reported.

While weather conditions during the next month will still determine if serious injury is to occur, it is advisable for farmers to prepare for weevil control. Cotton fields in which square formation has begun should be inspected for occurrence of weevil injury, Mr. Isely warned, and preparation should be made for control by dusting, until weevils are present in enough numbers to cause actual injury.

The time of beginning dusting should be determined by fresh injury on the cotton plants, not by fallen squares.

When infestation is general, dusting whole fields or cuts may be necessary. "Spot dusting" with a hand duster is preferable when the infestation is in isolated spots.

Let Discredit Be Given Where Discredit Is Due

PROBABLY it would be hard to find an American who is not in complete sympathy with the protests the government has made recently against aerial bombing of populous cities.
No matter what excuses may be advanced, that kind of bombing is a crime against humanity—and every American knows it.

Yet it is extremely important for us to realize just who the enemy is, when we make these protests.

It would be the worst kind of folly for us to let these bombing outrages persuade us that the Japanese people (for example), or the residents of rebel-controlled Spain, or the great mass of Italians and Germans, are bad and vicious and cruel and inhuman.

Those are people like ourselves. Some of them are good sorts and some of them are not so good. Taken by and large they are neither much better nor much worse than we are. As individual human beings they like the idea of bombing women and children no better than we like it.

THE real enemy is the militarist—the army man who has succumbed to the idea that no price is too high to pay for victory, who feels that any conceivable method of beating down one's foe is legitimate if it works. And that gentleman is not the exclusive possession of any country. He can be found everywhere.

If you hate these bombing raids (as you undoubtedly do) that man is your enemy—whether he wears the uniform of the Japanese, the Germans, the Spanish... or the Americans.

He is your enemy because he has no conception of what civilization means. He is willing to use in warfare weapons which mean that the entire world is the loser, whoever gains the immediate victory. He is blood brother to the old Assyrian monarchs who used to boast about the piles of mutilated corpses they erected outside of conquered cities.

AND it is important to get his identity fixed, for two reasons.
First, there is no sense in letting our indignation at the bombing outrages set up in us an antagonism to some specific nation. The road to war is built on just such antagonisms.
Once you believe that some particular people are cruel and conscienceless, you are practically ready to fight them.

Second, the militarist exists because we let him exist.
When we shrug our shoulders at some bit of war-time barbarism and say, "Well—that's war, and it can't be helped," we hold up his hand. The only way to stop him is to denounce him and his philosophy, in season and out of season—to denounce him, and not the particular nation he happens at the moment to be working for.

Only in that way can we stop this frightful growth of savagery.

The Body Regulates Its Heat Through Perspiration.

As the hot season approaches, even speed with which they begin to perspire and as to the amount of salts and other substances that they lose during perspiration. Moreover, people begin upon the human body. One of the chief uses of perspiration is to regulate the heat of the body and keep it normal.

The sweat glands are the chief paths by which water reaches the surface of the skin. Much water, however, passes through the skin by what is known as insensible perspiration.
It has been determined that the insensible perspiration is uniform except for a few areas on the palms and soles. It is impossible for the human body to control insensible perspiration, but the sweat glands are subject to nervous control and vary widely in the amounts of their activity.

Some tests have been made in the hot desert to determine how much fluid and other materials are lost from the body by way of sweat.

When profuse sweating occurs day after day, the amount of salt lost is less as times goes on. It is because of the loss of chlorides and salts from the body in the sweat that it is necessary for people working in extremely hot places to take small amounts of salt regularly in order to prevent heat stroke and heat cramps which result from a loss of salts by the body.

People vary, however, as to the

This Man, Joe Murray

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JOE MURRAY—like a new place, new jobs, new girls.
HELEN—fell in love—hard—and TERRY MALLOW—found love and kept it.

CHAPTER XIX

THAT was how Joe at long last came to let them know at home his whereabouts. He was forced to the step. He never saw Red again after that quick farewell at the mouth of the alley. He traveled far that night, and he saw nothing in the newspapers in another state about the shooting. What finally happened, he never learned.
But he knew that the police of the nation were informed, and that the jungles, the camps, the highways and the yards, were being searched and dragged and watched for a thousand miles around.

Joe made up a presentable bundle out of canvas stuffed with rope and papers and tied with ropes, all secured at a city dump, and registered in a cheap hotel on the strength of his baggage, and then wrote by air mail, telling the Murrays where he was, that he was in trouble and must lay low, and that he needed money to keep up the front. He gave no details; he said that he dared not travel or frequent the places of his kind until a storm blew over, and that they need only help him a little while. And they must not talk.

After the letter was dispatched, he spent four days in his room, going out only at night to scour the back ways of the city for a scrap of food.

Money arrived on the fifth day.
The letter was a quick scrawl, to lose no time. Most everything was as he had left it at home. Terry had given up her flat and moved back to her home. They did not see so much of her now. Dad was fine, working steady, but less money. Irene was still looking.
Tommy Withers was the lucky one; an expert now, in charge of maintenance, and well off. Here was a little money, all that was at hand. More would follow. Did he want more carfare home? They could manage somehow. Wouldn't he be best at home, safest? He must write immediately, and good luck.

It was a Spartan letter, without rebuks or tears; that was Mrs.
Murray writing.

Joe wrote, thanking them all, but he stayed where he was.

JOE was alone again, and a prisoner this time. He saw many of his kind—you always did, in the cities: lone ones wandering endless sidewalks, unable to break away. There was a low street in this town, a street you may never have heard of, but which is unique in the nation, cheap, sordid, starving, but crowded, garish, noisy with hawkers, pitchmen, medicine shows, dime restaurants, dime burlesques, nickel theaters... with people, all kinds and conditions. Old women with fixed staring eyes and bundles, old men moaning by, hung with scarecrow garments; young girls with bright eyes and unwashed necks, and young men strutting in patent leather shoes. Busy men and hard men and soft men and thieves.

Joe walked this street and he sat in his room. He looked for work, and he found none; he looked and looked, and he found none. So he walked this street and sat in his room. He walked by sunset or by dawn, indifferently, hoping only to earn a respite of sleep. He was living out all likelihood of danger from that great some night, he could not stay here, some longer, not belonging, with his roots not into this place; soon he must pick up and travel—and he lingered. There was at time an opiate. He lay long hours in the tiny room, while the city was quiet and while the city slept, and his closed eyes were filled with visions.

Visions... almost hallucinations.

It was hard any more to distinguish. Was peace, which a man once had known, a true vision or a vain delusion? Where familiar faces which came to mind, realities or phantoms? Was memory true or was it a mad thing? It was hard to know. Was he, this man, Joe Murray, the same man, the selfsame man...?

Memory was serving him well in those hours. Terry was not there, not exactly, not in those visions, which was a good thing, if a peculiar thing, for he did not wish to see the big brown eyes accusing him. He had failed her so utterly. He had been a reliance, and unaccountably become a drag on her. He was not lonesome for Terry. He shut her from his mind.
Grimly.

She was better off. For Terry had charity and affection, high hopes and his best wishes. She would forget quickly; it was her way. She would go far in life, above and beyond him, with her small and intense persistence, her ambitions, and her beguiling winning ways. It was not Terry; he shut her from his mind.

IT was Helen who was like a drug on his mind, a torment and then an ecstasy. In the silences her voice spoke; in the darkness she moved, shining; in the cool night she was a perfume, close. She was all happiness and all peace and all comfort. She was not know too soon, because there is nothing left afterward.

With her he lived another life, lost and again recovered.

He walked with her in the warm loamy spring, and there was neither loneliness nor poverty nor despair. They talked, and it was of hopes, high hopes, so certain of fulfillment. They listened to music, and were in a mood... and it was not brutal and tender, with a wildness and an anguish... it was all beauty, all peace, all comfort.

Polack!... Oh, Polack!...
In silence of the night, he moaned softly. This man, Joe Murray.

Visions... hallucinations.
But that was by night, in the quiet when life is suspended.
There was no beauty or peace by day. There was a rankling and a restlessness. He shut his mind, grimly, and the big brown eyes, accusing, came anyway. He walked on the street, and he saw a cheap little pink hat, worn just so, familiarly, bobbing just ahead of him, and his heart gave a small leap, a painful leap, and then the big brown eyes were accusing, yet were not there. He stood on the street, and in the crowd came a small familiar walk, and the brown eyes were staring, but they were never there when he looked.
He looked, while his heart raced and was in trepidation at what he might find.

These were no visions; these were no peace; these were reminders, little tabs of reminders, evoking a poignant failure and a loss. A small gay laugh in a crowd, the very special set of a bland small pair of shoulders across the street, a flicker of small, boyish ankles on a stairs, the scent of a certain cheap cosmetic... these were not peace any time, but a rebuke and a rankling, always.

This Joe Murray had reached a time. He knew it himself, that a time had come. He must hit the road again, be gone in the nation, lost in the hard preoccupation of hourly existence, with the company of his kind, with companionship...

has as much as his neighbors and shares equally with the others in the family.
Yet he feels neglected and misused.
The more he gets the more he wants.
Why?

Because he discredits anything that his minute he gets it. What others have, or others do, assumes too much importance in his eyes. His is the selfishness born of unsureness and lack of purpose.

Suppose Uncle Ned had sent him the shells? Billy would probably have said, "Oh, just some old shells. You can't do anything with shells." Molly took them at once gleefully and made games. He saw a new value in the shells then.

Herb made the most of his ping-pong table. He had the boys in every day and his enthusiasm was contagious.
And Tommy's aquarium would have bored Billy in short order. Yet Tommy made a hobby of his fish and sold the idea to his friends.

Billy could have made his workshop the most popular place on the street and himself the envy of his chums, if he had put his mind to it. He wanted it and then neglected to make the most of it.

The chronic whiner is usually a dreamer who does not quite know what he wants. Realization kills his interest. He will always want the unattainable.

Encourage such a child to work for what he gets. It sets up appreciation.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

A Frontier Town Mirrors Nation.

Some very good fiction has been rolling off the presses lately, portraying and interpreting this country, past and present. But probably there has been nothing better done, with more of the flavor of the nation, than Harold Sinclair's lyrical novel, "American Years" (Doubleday, Dorch: $2.75).

From the moment when you meet James Allen, sitting on a stump in the chip-strewn dooryard of his cabin, until you see at last the full emergence of his frontier spirit, you are whisked along at a lively pace. Scores of characters come and go, but Mr. Sinclair never fails to vivify them all.

It is these rare character deline-ations, in fact, which make this very readable historical novel. Though these people, Mr. Sinclair recreates the life of raw pioneer frontier from its humble rise from the prairie sod in 1830 to its zenith in 1880. And included among these characters are no less important personages than Lincoln, Douglas, Jefferson Davis, Zachary Taylor.

So you have here in the epic story of one with a pungent portrait of

Feminine-Allure Factory in "Artists and Models Abroad"

HOLLYWOOD.—Whether intentionally or not, Paramount's "Artists and Models Abroad" is doing a nice piece of satire on the beauty industry. In a spectacular scene supposed to take place in the Palace of Feminine Arts at the International Exposition in Paris, feminine appeal is manufactured on an assembly line, like automobiles.

Forty cuties clad in rubber bathing suits which are as invisible as the Flays Office will allow, move down a glorified chute and through a sunken dipping tank, or foam bath. Out of that, they step behind a large panel of opaque glass and can be seen dancing scantly.

On they go, down a little ramp, and take their places around a large circular platform, which revolves slowly. Around the edge of this platform and working at factory speed, are shoefitters, couturiers, manicurists, hairdressers, furriers, milliners, cosmeti-cians, jewelers. Each one adds something to the units on the assembly line. As each model completes the circuit she steps off, mounts a flight of steps and parades the length of the hall on a brilliantly lighted overhead unway.

Actors and Dummies Get Chummy

The Yacht Club Boys, Jack Benny, and seven girls, who are members of a stranded troupe of Americans, are fleeing from the French police. It is evening, and the fugitives dash into the Palace of Feminine Arts where workmen have been unpacking, assembling and dressing wax dummies for fashion displays. Some of the dummies are in place; others are strewn around in confusion of disjuncted arms and legs and bare torsos.

The fleeing actors freeze into various attitudes as though they, too, were dummies.
Gwen Kenyon dives into an erate with only her legs sticking out. Sheila Darcy partly swallows herself in tissue paper and assumes a stiff pose. Billy Mann freezes in the act of kissing goodbye to a beautiful dummy in traveling outfit. Charles Adler sits at the feet of another dummy and seems to be reading her a poem. Others as-

America itself. Mr. Sinclair sweeps across the whole horizon from the brotherhood to the Sunday school. The result is a bit of history sure to take its place among the best books of the year.—P. G. F.

some similar poses.
The police came in, search the place, and leave without discovering any actors.

It's a Shin, the Gail of Fiery Francesca.

The set for the new Bing Crosby picture, "Paris Honeymoon," is the main hall of a Balkan palace which Crosby, a rich American, has bought. He got rich when a grave was being dug for his grandfather, a prospector who died penitence. But the gravediggers struck gold.

Francesca Gail, the Hungarian musical comedy actress, has the leading feminine role. She is supposed to be a slavey who is chosen queen of a rose festival, and by tradition she must live for a week at the palace with all the rights of a queen.

A sure-enough tradition, in Miss Gail's homeland, is that a company of actors all must kick each other for luck before beginning a new play.
She insisted upon being kicked by all the principals, and they reluctantly obeyed. But now she is being resented upon Crosby, because the script calls for her to boot him in the shins.

In this scene an elderly actress, supposed to be the castle housekeeper, has some lines in which she mentions the name of the village, Pushtalnik.
But she just can't pronounce Pushtalnik. An assistant director tells me that they've been working on the scene all morning, and now other players have begun to blow their lines. Crosby is beginning to limp. Ten times his right shin has been kicked by the fiery little Gail.

This picture has everything in it from racketeers to a cowboy lament.
There's even a bit of pie-comedy, only Director Frank Tuttle has arranged to throw the man at the pie, which is news. The title, "Paris Honeymoon," is a typical Hollywood handle, for there is no honeymoon in the picture and it does not take place in Paris.

"The West African 'sea-going camel'" is a mud springer, or hippopotamus and climbing trees, carrying a mouthful of water along to squirt on itself to keep from drying out.

Be Your Best

If you can't be a pine on the top of a hill—
Be a scrub in the valley, but be The little scrub by the side of the hill—
Be a bush if you can't be a tree.
If you can't be a bush be a bit of the grass.
And some highway happier make;
If you can't be a "muskie" then just be a bass.
And the liveliest bass in the lake.
We can't all be captains, some have to be crew.
There's something for all of us here; Three's work to be done and we've all got to do.
Our part in a way that's sincere.
If you can't be a highway, then just be a trail.
If you can't be the sun, be a star;
It isn't the size, that we win or we fail;
Be the best of whatever we are!

Old Liberty
The Old Liberty Home Demonstration Club met June 16, 1938, with Mrs. A. M. Calhoun.

A club scrapbook is being prepared which will include the pictures of each member with her project.

A color study was conducted by Wilma McKelvey, Assistant Home Demonstration Agent. The following conclusions were drawn:

1. A person who has dark hair, eyes and complexion generally wear light yellow, red, green orange, and brown best.

2. Individuals with light hair and blue eyes wear blue, green, black and orchid best.

3. A persons with dark hair and blue eyes should select her most attractive feature and wear blues, greens, to emphasize the eyes and the warm colors listed in number one to emphasize the hair.

Refreshments of punch and cookies were served to approximately ten club members.

raised. A Spanish government source in commenting on the French action declared: "This might be disastrous for us."

"But then France has the privilege of changing her mind again if the non-intervention plan to remove foreign volunteers fails."

The development in Paris was taken here as implying there might be a mediation effort in the Spanish war by major European powers. However, obstacles still were great since both sides in the conflict appeared irreconcilable.

The French move was interpreted as an important concession to Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's European appeasement program. This was based on the Anglo-Italian friendship pact which in turn was contingent on a "settlement" in Spain.

The premier never has clarified what he meant by that but it is conceded generally to mean an insurgent victory, since Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy would accept nothing else.

Soviet Russia remains the main obstacle to the non-intervention scheme and there was no indication of what line she would take Tuesday.

For the first time in the Spanish war, now nearly two years old, British and Italy seemed on the point of agreement. It was believed Italy had assured Britain of her willingness to withdraw at least part of her troops serving in Spain.

Informed sources said Italy had sought immediate ratification of the Anglo-Italian accord of April 16 on the basis that a Spanish settlement, involving elimination of foreign intervention, was being held up by increased Soviet and French aid to Barcelona.

Paris dispatches said the French frontier was closed against aid to the Spanish government early three weeks ago and the decision to send a diplomatic mission to insurgent Spain was decided upon several days ago but kept secret until after Parliament adjourned last Friday until November.

France had sought a friendship agreement with Italy along the lines of the Anglo-Italian pact—but negotiations broke down May 14 because of differences over Spain.

Where Two Died When Train Plunged Through Bridge

Weakened by torrential flood waters of the Salt Fork of the Red river, the lofty bridge pictured above collapsed under the weight of a Fort Worth & Denver freight locomotive, allowing the train to plunge 60 feet into the murky water below. Engineer M. V. Griggs and Fireman C. E. Burton were drowned. Brakeman Dick Brown jumped as the bridge gave way, grasped a floating log and reached shore five miles downstream. He was in critical condition. The huge locomotive was buried in quicksand and completely submerged near the right of the picture. The accident occurred near Shamrock, Tex., as the train was en route from Childress to Pampa.

Farouk Launches Program to Modernize Egypt

CAIRO.—(P)—Youthful King Farouk is sponsoring a $70,000,000 plan to give each of his 16,000,000 subjects some of the benefits of the western civilization he likes so well.

When Farouk opened parliament he announced a 10-year program of social reforms for the fellahs, or peasants, who form 80 per cent of the population. The Egyptian government realizes a higher standard of living will increase production and give the country more money to pay its bills.

Western civilization has made long strides in Egypt in the last half century. Tourists who come to Cairo are often amazed at the broad, clean streets of the European quarter, with its streams of automobiles and its nine-story apartment houses.

Many Egyptians wear western clothes, topped by the scarlet tarbush. But 10 miles from the city the fellahs, whose ancestors built the pyramids, still live in low huts of brown Nile mud, with roughly thatched straw roofs, their mode of life little changed from that of their ancestors.

Iodine from seaweed has been found more effective in the treatment of goiter, than other forms of iodine.

STORIES IN STAMPS

How Andrew Jackson Was Marked for Life

WILD, quick-tempered, independent, young Andrew Jackson found a call most appealing to his spirit in resisting the British invasion of the late 1770s. While scarcely 13, he fought in the battle of Hanging Rock, Aug. 1, 1780, and the next year he and his brother joined their neighbors in a brave attempt to capture a body of British troops at Waxhaw Church near his home in Lancaster, S. C.

The attack failed and the two Jackson boys were taken prisoners. Andrew was put to work for the officers, and was ordered one day to black the commander's boots. Instantly, fiery young Andrew rebelled, whereupon the officer struck him a vicious saber blow, marking the future president for life. Moreover, that blow was to instill in Jackson an eternal hatred for the British, an antipathy which played no little part in the shaping of his dramatic career. He gained full revenge as the hero of New Orleans 34 years later.

Jackson is shown here on the 2-cent brown stamp of the U. S. issue of 1870. The stamp is reproduced slightly more than one and one-half times actual size. (Copyright, 1938, NEA Service, Inc.)

Louis Is Logical Choice Over Schmeling

By HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service

NEW YORK.—Joe Louis is the logical choice to defeat Max Schmeling at Yankee Stadium, June 2, but it is a hesitant vote which this observer casts for the champion.

The principal difference between them is nearly nine years in age... the distance a fighter slips in two years when he is past his peak and the margin another naturally coaxes on while riding the crest.

While he still has a multiple of mechanical faults, Louis scarcely will make all the mistakes he made on that memorable night two years ago when Schmeling's right for the first time removed the cloak of invincibility from the Brown Bomber. In 1936, the German and his crouch was something altogether new and extremely puzzling to the young negro of slight imagination.

All Louis knows is what he is told, and what he is told caused him to take Schmeling lightly the last trip. Smokey Joe trained poorly. The element of surprise was on the Feroocious Frankfurter's side.

Schmeling backs the tradition that no former heavyweight champion can regain the title. Better men than the Pretzel Pounder tried and failed... Jim Corbett, Bob Fitzsimmons, Jim Jeffries, and Jack Dempsey.

Louis Better Prepared For Return Engagement

Louis is better prepared this year. He probably has less incentive to win than Schmeling, who is taking a terrific gamble, the Nazi belief in the physical superiority of the Aryans being what it is.

How could Herr Maxie be held up as an example to German youth if he were knocked out by a black man? The Ullan's future in the Fatherland would be shot... and how he loves the Fatherland.

Schmeling is supremely confident. He must sincerely believe that he can repeat over Louis, whom he regards as little more than a dumb hitter. He is positive that he will return home with his reputation greater than ever.

His ambition is to regain the crown, retire with it, and strut along Unter den Linden for the remainder of his days. He will be the most disillusioned person in Yankee Stadium if he fails.

If either Louis or Schmeling has an element of greatness it rests in his punching power. Each has the chance of the puncher... is capable of turning the tide with one good poke.

The biggest point in Schmeling's favor rests along this line. The Teuton positively can take a solid belt and keep coming... or could up until two years ago.

Unless his head has grown harder since, Louis cannot. He could not shake off Schmeling's jarring jolts two years ago, at least. His most vulnerable point then seemed to be the temple. He hasn't been hit hard enough since to prove that he has overcome this weakness, and the chances are that he has not.

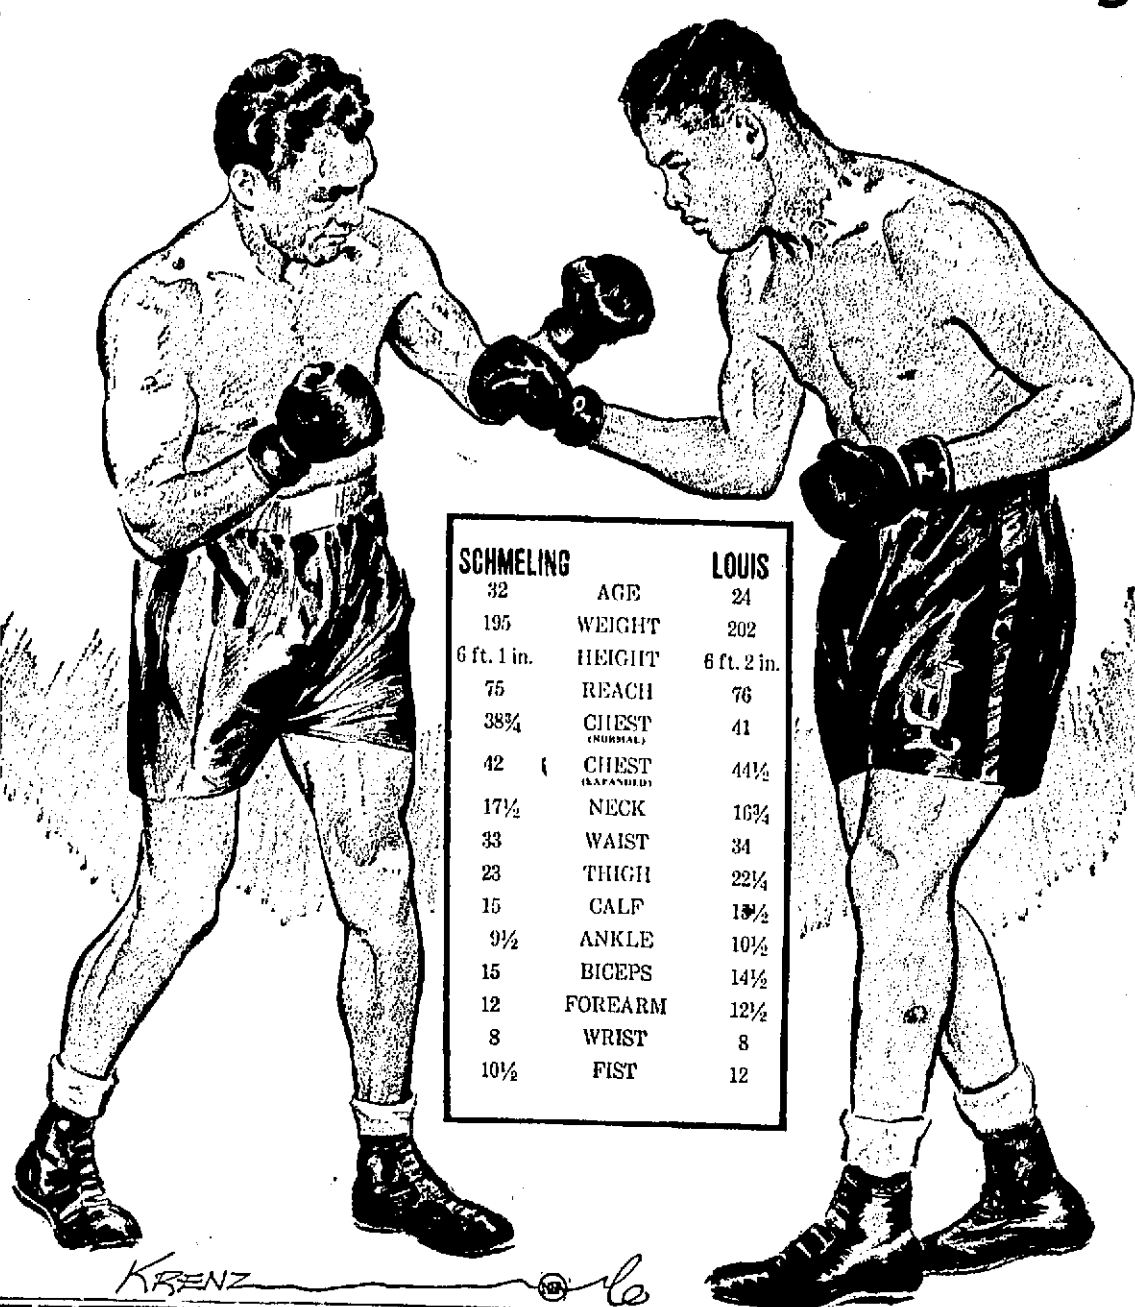

Fighter in Schmeling's Frame of Mind Is Tough

I repeat that Schmeling is the epitome of confidence. It is hard to defeat a fellow in his frame of mind. But it must also be remembered that Schmeling also took a savage beating in his first meeting with Louis. And 33 is a ripe old age to be hitting the comeback trail. Fitzsimmons knocked out Corbett at 35, but Ruby Robert was a freak, and Schmeling is neither a freak nor a Fitzsimmons.

It seems logical that Louis will try to get faster pace than he did last time.

And a succession of taps on the whiskers of a near 33-year-old man in the early going should put the 24-year-old Louis away in the lead. Then, if the fight goes the limit, it is more reasonable to believe that Louis, the harder puncher, younger, and having had it drummed into his thick skull to watch Schmeling's right, should hold his early advantage and perhaps improve it.

Schmeling has an idea that the Dark

SCHMELING	AGE	LOUIS

Angel remembers the terrific thumping he was dealt two years back. His supreme confidence is based on the belief that he has Louis' number... that he will put him in his place early... and keep him there.

What Louis has to forget is stumbling to the dressing room two years ago... a badly bruised boy.

The slightest hesitation on his part will be in Schmeling's favor.

Louis has the ammunition. He must unload it quickly and maintain a concerted fire to the finish.

Champion Girls' Team at Prescott

Little Rock Team to Appear at Prescott Friday Night

PRESCOTT, Ark.—The West End Lumber company girls softball team of Little Rock, state champions, will meet the Nevada Stars and Jane's Flyers, at Prescott Friday night. This will be the only appearance of the state champions in this section and a capacity crowd is expected.

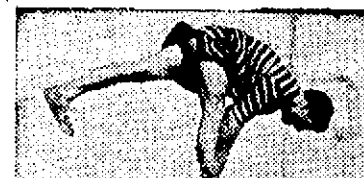

This Wednesday night an all-star team from Prescott will go to Little Rock to meet the state champion boys team, the Felton Cafe team.

The champions now have in their lineup the famed softball pitcher, "King Kong" Kelly. The Felton team will come to Prescott next week.

The team chosen to go to Little Rock will meet an all-star team from Hope here Tuesday night.

In the naval battle of Jutland in the World war, the Germans lost 11 vessels, and 2,863 men; the British 14 vessels, 6,617 men.

As Is

Grebb, although this started in reverse.

Tiger Flowers could not fight his fight against Jack Dempsey, who casually placed lilies in the deacon's hand twice in one night.

Joe Walcott appeared to have an inferiority complex when pitched into the same inclosure with Brooklyn Tommy West. Sam Langford was an old man before Harry Wills caught up with him.

Benny Leonard talked Lew Tendler out of what might have been a knock-out for the daddy of the southpaws, and then slaughtered him.

Battling Nelson was too durable for Gans. He lost on a foul in the 42nd round the first trip... then came back to twice knock out the Old Master. Gans was in a bad way physically in the sere and yellow of his illustrious career, yet would have belted out fighters who might have repelled Nelson.

Frank Moran silenced the cry, "Coffee first!" in New York, and then broke the hearts of Manhattan motorists by again parking Mary Ann amid the Roscommon Giant's whiskers. Langford repulsed or starved Big Jim Barry every time they tangled.

Carpenter Knocked Out Beckett

Georges Carpentier ironed out Gypsy Joe Beckett with dirty looks.

Tony Canzonieri had considerable left when the less competent Barney Ross twice took his measure.

King Tut had it on Billy Petrolle to such a great extent in two meetings that there was a cry of a gambling coup when the Fargo Express belted out the Minneapolis Mauler at Madison Square Garden. And Petrolle rather easily disposed of fellows capable of stirring up plenty of trouble for Tut.

Pancho Villa, a fly, picked on the better bantams with no little success, yet the Filipino was fully as mysterious as a McGuffey Reader to Frankie Genaro, a lad in his own class.

John Sutenberg, or some such spelling, made a practice of belting Jack Dempsey around early in the Man Mauler's career. Dempsey never won from Sutenberg, and still refers to him as his toughest foe.

Fighting largely is a matter of styles.

And I suspect that Jack Blackburn, wisest ringman in the Joe Louis group, would be greatly relieved if he were positive that his "Chappie" was not tailor-made for Max Schmeling.

The PAYOFF

By HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service

FOMPTON LAKES, N. J.—They profess confidence at Joe Louis' headquarters here. They do in all fight camps.

But the laugh you get when you suggest the possibility of Max Schmeling having Louis' number makes you suspect that there is considerable stewing about the same question.

Jack Blackburn, the champion's scar-faced old trainer, knows how a fighter feels when he has good reason to believe that the other bloke has the Indian sign on him. Blackburn, never weighing more than 140 pounds, beat Philadelphia Jack O'Brien and good heavyweights, but Joe Gans, then a legitimate lightweight, had all the answers for him on three occasions.

Young Corbett, little man of the world, had the sign on the supposedly invincible Terrible Terry McGovern. Knocked him out... and repeated.

There was a cycle of three great welterweights—Mike Twin Sullivan, Jimmy Gardner, and Harry Lewis. The way it ran was something like this: Gardner trounced Sullivan; Sullivan shelved Lewis; Lewis whipped Gardner. I may be wrong in the way their fights came out, but it was along that line.

Feder Maher could stiffen just about anybody he could hit, but Joe Goddard of Australia could tack the Irishman away any day in the week.

Tunney had it on Greb. Gene Tunney had it on poor Harry

When exhaling on crawl stroke, face should be back in water. Always remember air comes in through the mouth and is expelled through nose.

The air will come in naturally, but exhalation must be slightly forced out. Continue to exhale until you have expelled a normal breath.

Practice until you can exhale 20 respirations in the water comfortably, without tiring and without stopping.

Another Perfect Game

Johnny Vander Meer of the Cincinnati Reds, first pitcher to hurl consecutive no-hit, no-run games in organized baseball, and his sweetheart, Lois Stewart.

This is how Johnny Vander Meer, first pitcher to hurl consecutive no-hit, no-run games in organized baseball, grips the sphere in throwing what many consider the fastest ball in the business. The 23-year-old southpaw of the Cincinnati Reds has a dazzling curve.

Vander Meer Said to Be as Fast as Bob Feller and More Terrifying

Southpaw Typical American Boy Who Likes to Be Quiet—Jersey Lad Only Had to Develop Control to Be Real Star

By HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service

NEW YORK.—Johnny Vander Meer is a baseball movie hero who became real.

The first pitcher to hurl consecutive no-hit, no-run games in organized baseball tipped his cap to a major league manager for the first time in Miami five years ago, but he wasn't a bona fide recruit of the Brooklyn Dodgers. He was portraying a typical American boy getting a tryout.

The newsreel company which made the short sought a handsome lad who knew baseball from a squash. Dave Driscoll, then business manager of the Dodgers, recommended the then 17-year-old Johnny Vander Meer, who had attracted his attention in a church league at the youngster's home in Little Midland Park, about eight miles out of Paterson, N. J.

Brooklyn lost little to Vander Meer through its failure to keep his transfer papers straight. Cincinnati purchased him from Nashville in 1936, after he had had a phenomenal season with Durham of the Piedmont League.

Vander Meer, a left-handed fireballer, is a schoolboy's idea of what a fastball pitcher should look like.

McClellan Opens Campaign Office

Karl Greenhaw Handles Headquarters Candidate for Senate

LITTLE ROCK.—Campaign headquarters for Congressman John L. McClellan, who is a candidate for the United States Senate, were opened early this week upon the arrival of Karl Greenhaw of Fayetteville, who will be located permanently in Little Rock looking after the interests of Mr. McClellan.

The McClellan campaign headquarters are located in the Fulk building on West Markham street opposite the old State Capitol building.

In discussing the senatorial campaign, Mr. Greenhaw made the following statement: "Next to the president and the vice president, the most important elective office in the United States is that of United States Senator."

"Congressman McClellan is the embodiment of everything that goes to make a creditable and successful United States Senator."

"During the time that John L. McClellan has been a member of Congress, he has thoroughly demonstrated his ability as a statesman of whom the people of his native state have a right to be proud."

"As a result of his recent vigorous efforts, the state of Arkansas, under the McClellan amendment to the Federal Aid Highway bill, will now receive more than $5,000,000 for road construction without the state having to put up a single dollar to match it."

"He is an able speaker, a man of vigor, proven worth, great ability and unblemished record. Not only can he plan and formulate policies of great importance to the nation, but he can debate these vital questions on the floor of the Senate with credit to himself and his native state. As a public speaker, he probably has no superior in Arkansas."

"In Congressman McClellan, the people of Arkansas now have the opportunity to be represented in the United States Senate by a native son whose record of public service in the senate will add further honor and luster to the 'Wonder State.'"

Mr. Greenhaw is a former prosecuting attorney of the 14th district.
